

POETRY

Like the Sun

By Lilli Paterson

Your fingers surface
Stained in expired ink
And I find a new way to convince
Burnt honey skin
Waiting to be touched, but not held
“Like the sun,” I offer
For she sings the moon to sleep
Each morning
Only to be coated in darkness
That marks the end
Of her forever

Yet again