

EDITORS-IN-CHIEF

Anna Alva

Anna is a fifth-year Political Science major with a minor in Applied Ethics. Her primary research interests include political philosophy and critical theory, focusing especially on the intersections of race, gender, and sexuality.

Simone Rutherford

Simone is a third-year Political Science student minoring in Gender Studies. Her primary research interests revolve around the axes of identities such as gender, race, and sexuality. Specifically, on how these identities intersect to produce inequalities within power relations in the international arena.

EDITORS

Ava Redmond

Ava is a fourth-year Honours Political Science student minoring in Global Development Studies. She has a keen interest in identity, social movements and activism, and the intersection of pop culture and politics. Ava has recently completed and defended her Honours thesis, titled “The Revolution will be Fancammed”: K-Pop Stans, Identity, and the Online Political Organization of Fandoms for Social Movements.

Kaitlyn Kirkpatrick

Kaitlyn is a third-year Honours Political Science student minoring in Professional Writing in Journalism and Publishing. In the fall Kaitlyn will begin writing her Honours thesis exploring the relationship between political science and disability studies. She was excited to work with OnPol this year and hopes to put the skills she used here towards a career in journalism.

Taylor Nishimura

Taylor is a fourth-year student double-majoring in Geography and Political Sciences. She is interested in investigating the relationships between place, identity construction, and the spatial dimensions of systems of oppression. Taylor strongly believes in the value of interdisciplinary approaches in academics and is humbled and excited to be part of such a dynamic team of writers and editors!
