

III

Editorial Team

---

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Thomas Park

Thomas is in his fourth year, majoring in Honours Political Science. His specialization was in International Relations and his honours thesis explored whether the relationship between the United States of America and the Republic of Korea can be categorized as colonialism.

EDITORS

Ekamjot Pooni

Ekamjot (Ekam) Pooni is a fifth-year Political Science Honours student with a minor in Economics. Her thesis researched the change in anti-immigration discourse in Canadian mainstream news media between 2015 and 2025. She argues that the discourse spread gradually through affective repetition and discursive substitution.

Grace MacMaster

Grace is a fourth-year honours student majoring in political science, with a focus on political theory, and minoring in philosophy. Her thesis examines how differing ontologies-particularly Western scientific-materialist perspectives versus phenomenological and indigenous understandings of interconnectedness-shape approaches to productive organization and responses to the ecological crisis, arguing that ontologies can function as deep leverage points for systemic change.

Hanna Solis Perusquia

Hanna is a fourth-year student at the University of Victoria double-majoring in Political Science and Global Development. Her interests are in migration, globalization and development.

Jordyn Kramer

Jordyn is a fourth year Honours Political Science student with a minor in Economics. She recently completed her honours thesis examining the motivations behind state policies on inward remittances. Her research interests include global political economy and the politics of migration.

Lena Arlt-Dufresne

Lena is a Honours Political Science and Environmental Studies Double Major. Her academic areas of interest are international relations and security, human rights, environmental law and sustainability.

Kaya Dupuis

Kaya Dupuis is in her fourth and final year of Honours Political Science. Her thesis research focuses on arming Germany in a post-U.S. NATO World Order, specializing in deterrence theory and defence studies. Kaya is also a Junior Research Fellow at the NATO Association of Canada and contributes widely to discourse on international security.

PROOFREADERS

Gabriel Manriquez Urrea

Hilina Betru

Yuliya Morzhakova

V

Acknowledgments

---

On Politics would like to thank the University of Victoria Students' Society, the Department of Political Science, and the Undergraduates of Political Science course union for their continuous support and investment in undergraduate publishing and writing.

A special thank you to the faculty members of the University of Victoria who provided expert revision and advice to our authors:

Dr. Colin Chia
Dr. Feng Xu
Dr. Jamie Lawson
Dr. Laura Parisi
Dr. Matt James
Dr. Marlea Clarke
Dr. Justin Leifso

Additional acknowledgments to:

UPS President Emma Attwell, for their continuous help and support.
UPS Vice President, Zeh Fletch, for their guidance. UPS Director of Finance Kyran Buhler, for always going above and beyond in securing funding for the journal. Political Science Chair Dr. Feng Xu, for her support, kindness, and guidance in this process.
Political Science faculty, Dr. Justin Leifso, for his support and mentorship throughout this process.
Coco Cunningham, last year's Editor-in-Chief, for their continuous help.
Darcy Eygun for creating such a wonderful cover design.
Political Science Administrative Officer Rosemary Barlow, for her support and kindness.