

About the Contributors

Lacey Eninew is Woodland Cree First Nations from the Lac La Ronge Indian Band, and a high school teacher based at Rhoda Hardlotte Memorial Kethanow High School. Lacey's research interests include land based/arts education and its impact on the resurgence of Indigenous identity in First Nation youth. lacey.eninew@gmail.com

Keith N. Goulet is Nehinuw (Cree) and currently a PhD student based at the University of Regina in Saskatchewan. As a fluent Cree speaker, Keith's research interests include a study of the Cree language and Indigenous history. His dissertation examines the Cree concept of land and the colonial history of dispossession. kngoulet@sasktel.net

Linda Goulet is a Professor Emeritus with the Department of Indigenous Education at First Nations University of Canada, Prince Albert, Saskatchewan. Linda's research interests include Indigenous pedagogy, Indigenous youth wellbeing and the arts, and collaborative research. lgoulet@fnuniv.ca

Alex Hotere-Barnes is a kairangahau matua, senior researcher/evaluator, facilitator Māori-medium with CORE Education in New Zealand. Alex's primary role is to advance the research and evaluation capabilities of organisations, with a particular focus on Māori educational issues. He has held a range of research and evaluation roles within the education and community sectors. alexlbarnes@gmail.com

Nola Turner-Jensen is Wiradjuri First Nation Australian and currently the lead researcher for the CultuRecode Project and Founder of Crackerjack Education. nola@culturecodesv.com Nola's research interests include ancient evolution of Cultural Mindset differences and exploring ways to restore Aboriginal cultural systems and ways of knowing. nola@crackerjackeducation.com.au

Donna Leslie is an Associate Professor at the Queensland College of Art, Griffith University, Brisbane. Donna is an art historian who specialises in Australian art and whose writing is also informed by her lifelong commitment to painting and art practice. For many years her research has focused upon the work and lives of Australian artists and themes of spirituality and cross-culturalism in the visual arts. donna.leslie@griffith.edu.au

Warren Linds is an Associate Professor in the Department of Applied Human Sciences at Concordia University, Montreal, Quebec. Warren's research interests include applying arts-based, critical pedagogy, and applied theatre to address issues of social justice, and well-being working with Indigenous youth. warren.linds@concordia.ca

Jo Anne Rey is currently developing curriculum for the Department of Indigenous Studies, Faculty of Arts, Macquarie University, North Ryde. NSW, 2113. Australia. Her doctoral thesis, Country Tracking Voices: Dharug women's perspectives on presences, places and practices, was undertaken within the Department of Educational Studies, Faculty of Human Sciences at Macquarie University. jo.rey@mq.edu.au

Janice Victor is currently an Assistant Professor in the Faculty of Health Sciences at the University of Lethbridge, Alberta. Her research interests include social justice, well-being, healing, indigenizing colonial institutions, child welfare, community development, agency, restorative justice, as well as, qualitative and arts-based methodologies. Janice.victor@uleth.ca